Founder Of Frontier College Did

Work Of Inestimable Value

The late Alfred Pittsford, M.A., founder of the Frontier College, with headquarters in Toronto, and who died at his home in 1901, at the age of retirement two or three years ago, was a fine piece of work for his country.

It was a unique idea, reflecting imagination and vision, which kind of this late educationist during the beginning of the present century, the idea being to carry education in a day-to-day program into factories, mining and other camps in this country. Pittsford's vision was that of "labor teachers," —men, mostly young men, who could go into these camps, work as camp workers, and at the same time, by their own instruction, become men in an educational way at night when the days work was over.

The work of the Frontier College over this more than a generation has been of inestimable value. Those men of men have benefited from it.

They have been trained in an academic way, and they have been educated in a practical way. The college has developed into a far-reaching educational agency.

Mr. Pittsford, who was a missionary on the Canadian prairies before founding the Frontier College died at his home in 1901, at the

his country.
